

Community Preference Guidelines

For homes located within the City of Seattle Homestead's buyer selection criteria considers applicants that meet the City of Seattle's Community Preference guidelines. Community Preference recognizes that people with historic ties to particular neighborhoods may have been displaced by economic forces including gentrification, or that they may be at imminent risk of gentrification.

What Neighborhoods Qualify?

The City of Seattle has identified particular neighborhoods, or "census tract's", in the city where displacement has taken place or is at risk of taking place. The qualifying census tracts mapped here and listed on the 2nd page:

Who Qualifies for Community Preference Criteria?

Applicants who currently live, have previously lived or whose family has historic ties to the census tracts listed may receive community preference consideration in our buyer selection process.

Determining Your Census Tract:

Current Residents of Neighborhood: To determine if you are a current resident of one of the designated preference census tracts, you can look up your address using this online tool: Census Tract Look Up

Past resident displaced from the neighborhood: To determine if you are a past resident of one of the designated preference census tracts, you can look up your previous address using this online tool: Census Tract Look Up

Historic Ties: If you are establishing a historical tie to the neighborhood from a relative or an ancestor, use the address on their household documentation from the time of residency in the same look-up system: Census Tract Look Up.
